According to this theory the table-land in question nught to be the great end of his life. And if this is so success in a very enviable thing : and dappiness is to be found, not among the shepherds and shapherdesses of Arcadis, but among the Lord Mayors, and Cabinet and Judges, ministers. and the Bishops of the land. At first eight i seems as if one night not to lay too much stress mon the Lord Mayor. Nobody it is true, oxcept a well-fed and successful tradesman can tell. the righ happpiness of the man who is called by the voice of his brother aldermen to spend his range in first class Guarits Googwee on modedays in sending thieves and vagrants to jail, and rate terms. his evenings in the company of turtle-soup and pincapples, with Mr. Harker to crave silence for him whenever he has any noblo centiment that he wishes to express. But the Lord Mayor's dignity is an very brief, that it would be raore philosophical to take a Bishop, or perhaps a Judge, as a full spenimen of mon who have clambered on to their beloved table-land, whether the particular ship-land be carpeted with lawn or with ermine. Each of the fortunate grantures knows In the socret recorses of his heart that he has gons through a great deal of hot and weary oliming, and that much of his life has been spent upon his hands and knees. The Bishop perhaps started carly in his career with a number of better men than himself. Having his eye ppon his tablefand, he soon parted company with them, and tied himself to the tail of a giant religious society. or took to composing tracks, or went in for missingery lectures and water-bot les, or else, being a heantiful and presentable being, was lucky enough to marry into a pieus nobleman's family.
